Britain And France Debating Schuman Merger Plan

Thionville, Northern France, May 29.—The French Foreign Minister, M. Robert Schuman, said here today that among the opponents of his European coal and steel pooling plan are "the timid ones who seek salvation strictly within their national frame".

the door is left open in South-East Asia. In short, deeds not words, and happily both the United States and the Commonwealth have acted. That is heartening. Until recently, the policy of both had inclined to be negative in character. Not because the grim facts were not known and understood, except perhaps there was some lack of appreciation of France's downward trend in Indo-China, but because there was little disposition to march along parallel lines. Britain, shouldering the cost of combatting guerilla terrorism in Malaya and maintaining a largely expanded garrison in Hongkong, felt she had done her share, strategically, tactically, and financially. The United States experienced difficulty in accepting the implications of the collapse of the Nationalist Government in China, and, for that matter, any inclination to be realistic was accommeal assistance can achieve no more than engineer a breathing-space while a broader political and strategical concept emerges us the result of Big Three consultations and becomes operative. For that 'reason, American approval of the results of the Commonwealth conference at Sydney is of the highest importance and promise. Only a long-term policy designed to break poverty and gradually create conditions ensuring a raising of over-all living standards can offer the. slightest chance of success in combatting the Communist mennee. For the time being, however, a prospective improvement for social well-being is no substitute for direct methods of challenging the Red onslaught, the use of arms. The conflict in this part of the globe, unfortunately, has yet to revert to the category of cold war. Suppression of the Communist-inspired guerillas in Malaya and Indo-China will compel exertion of military force on a scale exceeding any that has gone before, and then it is likely to prove a long and painful process. The vital thing, however, has been accomplished. The United States hesitates no longer. Indo-China's uncomfortable

British Oil Lead

According to a statement by experts of leading oil concerns, Britain has made important gains in the race for oil supremacy in the Middle East.

Last year British and affiliated concerns produced three-fifths of the total of 56 million tons of crude oil, while American concerns produced two-fifths. Development projects provide for an increase in production to 130 million tons by 1953, with Britain retaining the above proportion.

Refining figures also favour Britain with 25 million tons of oil products against America's 13 million tons. By 1953 British refining output is to reach 31 million tons, against 17 million by the Americans.

A sudden drop in Middle East production, caused by a decline in United States imports, affected mainly the American interests and mixed British and American Kuwait concerns.

Gadget-minded Germans Have Bright Ideas

By Menno Duerksen

The very novelty of it, say the merchants, attracts people to look and later to buy. The spot is placed too high for chiklren.

FOR THE HOUSEWIVE

For the housewife there, is a hot water heater which, say the Germans, is much more economical to operate than the normal tank-type water heater, and is fully automatic.

You merely open the tap and the release of pressure in the water pipe, caused by opening the tap, causes a gas flame to spring on under a rail, and hot water is coming out in five seconds. THE SUDAN

Brown-outs, black-outs and dim-outs are a regular feature of Khartoum life.

With worn-out generators, the weltage at the peak hours clips down to 140 instead of the throretical 220.

Rafrigorators overheat and reuse to work, newspapers and books cannot be read, fans stand still and the temperature in the chade approaches 110 degrees Fahrenheit.

The Suden Light and Power Co tell shopkeepers, traders and residents to economise. But the newspapers remind the company that there is nothing on which to economise.

From time to time, rumours spring up about new generators turiving from Britain. These are as quickly denied by the company.

On top of all this, the price of electricity has been raised to eleven pence a unit. This is an expensive proposition, as one refrigerator and at least two fans are essential to every home in the Sudan.-United Press.

giving effect to it." Mr Strauss added that rushing through of this legislation in the way it was being done would further help to lower the prestige of the Union in the eyes of the outside world.
